ABSTRACT

This report contains the average verbal, mathematical, and combined Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores for several racial/ethnic groups for the nine-year period from 1976 through 1984. The study specifically identifies the following racial/ethnic groups: American Indians, Blacks, Mexican Americans, Orientals, Puerto Ricans, and Whites. It is the first time such data has been arranged on a state-by-state basis. The report is designed to provide information to the educational community concerning progress of students over time. Racial/ethnic data may be used by teachers, administrators, parents' groups, and those concerned with the legislative process to highlight differential attainment of particular groups. The data may also be used to identify educational and financial remedies to correct the balance. All student demographic information is self-reported as part of the process of registering for the Admissions Testing Program. (DWH)

The Admissions Testing Program (ATP) is a service of the College Board, a nonprofit membership organization that provides tests and other educational services for students, schools, and colleges. The membership is composed of more than 2,500 colleges, schools, school systems, and education associations. Representatives of the members serve on the Board of Trustees and advisory councils and committees that consider the programs of the College Board and participate in the determination of its policies and activities.

The price of this booklet is $6.00 per copy.

Introduction

In 1980 the Trustees of the College Board approved the release of racial/ethnic data from the various testing programs of the Board. As described by George H. Hanford, president of the College Board, upon the first publication of these data in 1982, the "question of whether the College Board should publish aggregated data according to the racial/ethnic characteristics of the students who participate in its programs has been a controversial one since we began collecting such data. Briefly, the honest difference of opinion has been between those who fear that publication of these data will serve to convey a misperception of minority students' ability, and those who believe that exposure of the data to public scrutiny will serve better minority interests by demonstrating the need for (and thus lead to) more affirmative action with respect to access to higher education. We have been encouraged toward the latter position in recent years, first, by requests for the data by minority researchers in the aftermath of the Bakke decision and, second, by the charge of secrecy leveled against test sponsors by proponents of legislation to regulate testing.

"We concluded that in such circumstances the College Board, as a matter of principle, should not impose restraints on access to generalized program data because of our own concept of public interest. We did so knowing that the question continues to be controversial, and we did so knowing that it is possible for any data to be irresponsibly or incorrectly used and that such misuse is an inevitable risk. Nevertheless, we are convinced that the data, to the clear advantage of minority youth, will serve to illuminate the extent and nature of the educational deficit this nation must overcome."

The first tangible expression of the Trustees' policy was the publication, in 1982, of Profiles, College-Bound Seniors, 1981. This publication related verbal and mathematical Scholastic Aptitude Test scores, and Achievement Test scores, to various demographic factors (e.g., family income, years of course study in high school) for each racial/ethnic group. Subsequent editions of Profiles, College-Bound Seniors for 1982, 1983, and 1984 permit the measurement of progress over time of the various racial/ethnic groups.

This report, containing the average verbal, mathematical, and combined SAT scores for each racial/ethnic group for a nine-year period, represents the first time that these data have been aggregated on a state-by-state basis. Its purpose is to serve the educational community by adding to the information base of the progress of students over time. Since the initial release of racial/ethnic data by the College Board in 1982, the use of such data by various groups and the effect on the educational enterprise seem to have been positive. These data have been used by teachers, administrators, parents' groups, and those concerned with the legislative process, to highlight differential attainment of particular groups—and to seek educational and financial remedies to "right the balance." We trust that these state data will be similarly viewed and utilized.

Three notes of caution are called for: (1) Differences from state to state in the mean scores for various groups are largely a function of the numbers of students taking the test in the particular states. As a rule, the larger the proportion of high school graduates who took the SAT within a state, the lower the average scores for that state. Therefore, comparison of the number of test takers from each racial/ethnic group within a state to the total in the state's school population or high school graduating class might prove more helpful in policy planning and evaluation than seeking to determine if scores are "lower" or "higher" than those in neighboring states. (2) A second caution also relates to group size. In certain states there are a miniscule number of test takers within particular groups; e.g., Mexican-Americans in Alaska. It is recommended that for any state where the number of test takers in any racial/ethnic group falls below 100, the test score averages be viewed and used with extreme caution. (3) All demographic information about students, including their racial/ethnic affiliation, is self-reported as part of the process of registering for the Admissions Testing Program. This information is not collected with precision. For example, candidates who indicate that they are "American Indian" are not limited to the formal definition of those who are one-quarter or more Indian. This may result in a slight overcount of American Indians.

For those community leaders, educators, and legislators who are interested in more detailed analyses of educational data at the state level, two other services resulting from the 1980 Trustee policy decision are available: (1) The End-of-Year State Data Tapes contain data on all Admissions Testing Program test takers within a particular state, including students' scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test and Achievement Tests, and all the academic, personal, and social data they supplied as part of the test registration process; (2) the College Board Data Tapes contain similar data, but for a sample of ten thousand or one hundred thousand students from the national test-taking population.

We are pleased to offer this report to the general public and, in the words of George H. Hanford in the first report of racial/ethnic data, "We encourage scholarly use of the data to support better evaluation and understanding of student performance and to advance educational opportunity and achievement for all students."
